Your Letters

Dear Editor,

What with High Street Landbeach now effectively a 3rd lane of the A10, many of us residents would like to see more action from the Parish Council. Living in the High Street is now more dangerous than at any time I can remember over the past 36 years, and we want it stopped by any process that will compel the transient boy racers to keep to at or below 30 mph, or else face prosecution. We don't want speed bumps/sleeping policemen because they cause underground vibrations which affect building foundations, but a few sets of traffic lights which are programmed to turn red when they sense approaching traffic is exceeding 30 mph are well worth exploring. Combine that with number plate recognition photography and we might see a very marked reduction in the amount of traffic we currently endure. An increase in the Parish precept may be needed to pay for this, but with the inevitable explosion in the amount of traffic on the A10 when Waterbeach New Town gets going, we, as a village, need to be ahead of the game, not limping along behind events.

After Remembrance Day, wreaths will again be taken to the graves/memorials of those soldiers on the Landbeach War Memorial who fell this year. One shared wreath will go to the Thiepval Memorial, one to Mill Road Cemetery Thiepval and one to Thessaloniki. These are generously supplied free of charge by the Royal British legion. If you would like to take a wreath, please contact Barbara Le Gallez on (01223) 860283, blegallez@yahoo.co.uk by the end of July (early deadline to enable purchase of cheap flights / train tickets).

Items for August are needed by Wed 20th July, please. Barbara Le Gallez, 113 Waterbeach Rd, 01223 860283, blegallez@yahoo.co.uk.

A June Dawn

Barbara Le Gallez

One morning in early June I woke up at 3:30am and couldn't get back to sleep, so I went for a walk down the garden. The night was cloudy, and the air was pleasantly cool after a hot day yesterday, with a light dew on the grass. There was light enough to walk around by, and the leaves on the trees and bushes were clearly visible, although everything was either light or dark grey. It was a very restful scene. At first there was no sound whatsoever, and the whole world seemed asleep. But, as I reached the bottom of the garden, I could hear the melodious hoots of waterfowl from the lakes in the distance – a surprising variety of calls, sounding as if a whole bird city were waking up and getting busy. Irritatingly, I could also hear the occasional less melodious roar of a heavy lorry on the A10. Peeping into the field at the back with my torch, I saw some fawn-coloured beings whose yellow eyes shone in the torchlight. Were they the foxes who had killed my neighbours' chickens? No, they lolloped away in an unmistakeable rabbit-like manner. Some wood pigeons, disturbed by my torch, crashed out of the branches above. Returning back to the house I was stared at by more shiny eyes – this time belonging to a light-coloured animal who trotted away swiftly. Still not a fox, but a white cat this time. I went inside for breakfast – oh, how stuffy the air seemed inside the house – and to write this note for you. After a quarter of an hour I popped out again. What a difference in that short time! It was not yet four, the sky looked the same, but the bushes were now faintly shaded green and the birds were singing. Half an hour later, the garden was painted in all its different shades, as another June day quietly and politely strolled in.
